

arrays, already known for their use in metrology and quantum information as efficient waveguides and mirrors, are now being studied in alternative geometries. Inspired by nature, we investigate chiral and helical structures, as well as ring-shaped arrays.